OVERVIEW OF DATA OWNERSHIP AND PRIVACY

The Terms of Use set forth below detail how your customer data (CRM), prospect data (marketing lists), website traffic (log files), and/or potential customer data will be collected, used, and shared in connection with your access to the services provided by Semcasting, Inc. The Terms of Use describes your choices and the choices of your customers, prospects and website visitors regarding the use, access and correction or deletion of the user information you provide to us. This section summarizes a few key provisions for you in plain English, but the entirety of your rights and responsibilities (and ours) are as spelled out in the body of the Terms of Use

In simplest terms, your data will remain yours (or your licensors) and you will grant us rights in your data only for the purpose of delivering the services to you as described below and in our applicable documentation.

Our services provide you with the ability to customize and activate your audiences and measure the results for marketing purposes. To provide our services, we need your permission to do things like store, transmit, access and process your data. By agreeing to the Terms, you give us permission to match the data, and this permission extends to our affiliates and trusted third parties we may work with.

Your customer CRM and prospecting files may include postal address, postal delivery codes, names, emails, and/or phone numbers. They are being provided so that we may process and activate these records as anonymous digital identifiers in our proprietary data. The CRM and prospect data you provide us are transferred and stored to a secure location on our servers that is available only to you as the account holder. Upon matching your CRM and prospecting files to our anonymous digital identifiers your data is immediately deleted and removed from our servers.

In addition, your web and ad servers log information including a user's IP address, time and date, browser type and the referring URL, as well as the current URL and the URL the user requested is always provided by a user's browser and automatically logged by most websites. If you wish to provide us with your web and ad servers log information, to provide our services, we will access these logs and resolve them against our proprietary data. These log files are transferred to a secure location on our servers that is available only to you as the account holder. Upon matching your log files to our proprietary data the log files are immediately deleted and removed from our servers.

We take consumer choice, data protection and ownership very seriously. When you use our services, we commit to act responsibly and to comply with, or exceed, industry standards to keep your information secure and maintain the confidentiality of your users in our data warehouse. Your data will be stored in a secured, SOC 1 and SOC2/SSAE 16/ISAE 3402 compliant data center, with protections in place to guard against security risks.

Your Responsibilities Regarding Data Ownership and Privacy

You agree to use our Services and the Matched Data solely for the purposes of your marketing programs; targeting your customers, prospects and website clients only. Additionally, you agree to use our services and matched data only as permitted by applicable law, including export control laws and regulations.

Your use of the services and the matched data must comply with our Permitted Uses and Restrictions (Section 2.02) included in this Terms of Use. You must meet our minimum security requirements set forth in Section 2.1(L) and you must include language within your website Privacy Policy that complies with the Digital Advertising Alliance (DAA) guidelines and that supports each user's right to opt- out of data collection.

Central to this compliance is your obligation to notify your clients that you collect certain information about them for marketing purposes, how you use that information, and how they may choose to opt out of your data collection process.

An example of language that is required to be added to your Privacy Policy follows. WE ARE NOT YOUR LEGAL COUNSEL, AND DO NOT MAKE ANY REPRESENTATION OR WARRANTY THAT THIS LANGUAGE WILL BE SUFFICIENT FOR YOUR UNIQUE CIRCUMSTANCES. Please check with your attorneys to confirm that your final language meets legal requirements applicable to you:

“(Example) Privacy and User Consent for Use of Web Traffic

You are providing consent for us to use the traffic on this website to improve our service. Website log analysis and cookies let us anonymously see how this site is being used and to generate an aggregated list of anonymous users who may be contacted for marketing purposes. Log analysis and cookies also allow us to show content which is most relevant to you. You may choose to opt- out of having your traffic information used as part of the web log analysis or any use of cookies which are not essential for the site to run by emailing us at [(replace with your contact email) optout@yourorganization.com] The website owner will notify the service provider and your information will be removed from any analysis and marketing that results.”

In addition, your use of the service and the matched data may include a User's Choice to review what public information, behavioral and modeled data elements Semcasting may have associated to each of your customers or prospect records. User's, at their request, may review and request that one or more of these data elements be deleted, or that all Semcasting data associated with their record be deleted. Semcasting is committed to supporting User Choice and may provide tools such as www.privacychoice.com that can be incorporated into marketing campaigns that will support a user's access to the data and provide them with a choice to opt-in or opt-out of future marketing by you based on their data.

Help us keep you informed and your data protected. Safeguard your password to the services, and keep your account information current.
